

PRESENTATION

The Mackenzie Law Review (Revista Direito Mackenzie – RDM) begins 2025 with the first issue of volume 19, bringing together outstanding scholarly contributions across the journal’s three editorial lines. In line with its commitment to internationalization and to expanding its readership, this edition includes original articles by foreign scholars, as well as bilingual contributions.

In the first semester of 2025, RDM supported the event “Study of historiographical Categories: Rethinking the Study of Brazilian Law”, conducted by Professor Rui Cunha Martins from the University of Coimbra. The event was based on the article published in issue v. 18, n. 3 (2024) of the journal, entitled “Transition or chronoconference: an application of historiographical categories to the analysis of the contemporary Brazilian legal system (1941–2021).”

- FELIPE CHIARELLO DE SOUZA PINTO
- MARCO ANTONIO LOSCHIAVO LEME DE BARROS

In his presentation, Professor Martins explored the temporal transformations of modern society, proposing a new perspective on historical change. He critically examined the concept of “transition,” highlighting the convergence of distinct historicities – particularly in relation to the evidentiary regime in criminal procedure within a Democratic Rule of Law.

We wish all our readers an excellent and enriching experience with this first edition of 2025.
